NOVEMBER - DECEMBER 2022

Rupert Jasen Smith, The Kiss, from the Greta Garbo Suite, 1988

The holidays are here! As dry, autumn leaves grace the New York City pavement and daylight grows dim, the seasons change. Woodward Gallery's current group exhibition, Winter Mix, explores this seasonal transition in the form of artistic expression. Gallery Director, John Woodward, curates work from Artists Robert Indiana, Susan Breen, Knox Martin, Terence Netter, Keith Haring, LA2, Rupert Jasen Smith, and Kenji Nakayama. This selection tells the classic, yet exciting, tale of the natural transformation from Fall to Winter.

As the days become shorter and more frigid in climate, emotional warmth is expressed, artistically. These artists utilize primary color (red, yellow, blue), sharp or curving shapes, and recognizable images, such as Robert Indiana's "LOVE," Keith Haring's dancing figure, and Susan Breen's icy snowflake. Themes such as love, passion, religion, and celebration unite these diverse works of art, illustrating what "mixes" together to form the season. Through Winter darkness, these Artists offer illumination.

This exhibition is presented at Woodward Gallery in our street-level windows 24/7, by private appointment, and as an online exhibition on our website (WoodwardGallery.net), Artsy.net, and Widewalls.ch. Happy Holidays!
